Longevity vital for Hall mark

RUSSELL EMMERSON

INDUCTEES to the family business Hall of Fame need to prove not only their business success but also their longevity, convenor Rod Martin said.

“We are looking for companies that have made a difference, that have started out from humble beginnings to become household names,” he said.

“When you look behind the brand, you discover they are actually South Australian companies.”

The SA chapter of Family Business Australia last week welcomed four businesses into its Hall of Fame.

Car and furniture business CMV Group – which owns CMI Toyota – was inducted, as was family pharmaceutical firm Hamilton Laboratories.

Fourth-generation Spring Gully Foods and seafood retailer and wholesaler Angelakis Bros were also inducted at the sixth annual ceremony.

They join 24 strong brands including confectioner Haigh’s and winemaker Yalumba.
